"You're not about to step on a rollercoaster. You are about to plummet into the mind and nightmares of a master storyteller." -Hunter Shea (from his introduction) You never know what to expect from Terry M. West. A horror author who has delivered the scares for three decades, West chases his dark muse in any direction it goes. Old school creature feature, psychological horror, suspense, B-Movie cheese, humor, dystopia, and extreme horror so dark that it will leave a mark inside-- West refuses categorization. But the one constant to his work: it is always one Hell of a ride. GRUESOME: A Gathering of Nightmares, collects some of his best fiction. Included in this 150,000 word collection: Don't the Monsters All Get Scariest at Closing Time, Hunger, Morsel, Turning Face, Picaro, It Makes You Sad, The Rose Man, Southern-Fried Hex (featuring the brand new tale, Cecil & Bubba meet a Drunk Gypsy), Hair and Blood Machine, Hunger 2, All of the Flesh Served. Includes an introduction by the one and only Hunter Shea. The older tales presented in Gruesome have been re-edited, polished, and in some cases expanded with all new material.
