When Lilly imagined her wedding night, she envisioned a fairy-tale evening full of love, which does happen for her. But then, tragedy hits... her husband dies in a car accident on their way home from their wedding, and Lilly's world is completely destroyed. Suddenly, the man she loved is tragically, irrevocably gone, and she is left picking up the pieces of her shattered heart. Meanwhile, Luke is losing himself in a bottle of booze on the night his brother dies, trying to convince his heart that it doesn't love his brother's wife. Now, he grieves his brother while feeling a bottom sense of guilt... a guilt he feels because, even after everything that has happened, Luke still wants Lilly, body, heart, and soul. Suddenly, Lilliana's house is broken into and they are thrust together in an unusual situation. Luke is determined to protect her, no matter what the cost, and maybe win over her heart in the process. Can Luke piece back together Lilly's broken heart and make her see that his love for her is real and unyielding? Will Lilly find room in her heart for both her late husband and the man she is falling for, or will she be too scared to let love in?
