The news about the baby changes Will's behavior and he shows his affection by taking care of her and making sure that she has everything. Timothy is no longer considered a threat by Will and Lydia is happy to see her husband calmer and more understanding. Their life together takes a natural turn and Will starts to treat her as a wife for the first time since they got married. To celebrate a very good business deal, Will organizes a party at the ranch, inviting family and friends from the East. Together with his best friend from the University comes also his sister, Arabela Douglass. Lydia immediately sees that the young and beautiful woman is in love with her husband and that William is unaware of the fact. Arabela, however, makes sure to inform Lydia about her intention to have Will for herself and with that really scares the young and still unsecure, six months pregnant woman.

When Will acts as if he doesn't mind Arabela's attention, Lydia decides to leave the ranch. She manages to reach only the nearest town, when Will, together with Timothy catches up with her and finally confesses his love for her. Note: Contains Explicit Scenes of Passion and Desire. Intended For Adult Eyes Only!
