Written in the style of an old world fairy tale, "Her Special Day Shoes" is about a young girl from York, England, during the height of the Industrial Revolution, who finds herself orphaned and home after her parents are killed in a terrible accident. Refusing to allow herself and her little brother to be taken in by an orphanage, Rachael slaves away along side other children at a textile factory for pennies a day just to keep food in their bellies. Her only escape from her miserable lot in life comes from a pair of shoes displayed in a cobbler shop's window that she dreams will one day take her far and away. Additional Works Also included in this volume, are two popular posts from Michael's blog where he shares personal stories of his unusual and unlikely encounters with celebrities Sylvester Stallone, Brigitte Nielsen, Zsa Zsa Gabor, and Larry Gatlin and the Gatlin Brothers.

BONUS: Michael shares his Award Winning Essay, "White on White Crime," which describes his experiences as a child growing up in the very same small town in Tennessee where his father had.
