In a Cornish village, Jonah and Sally live a teenage love of secret encounters and dreams for a future that will last forever. But at eighteen some promises are hard to keep and when on a fatal night tragedy strikes, their paths take different turns and separate. Ten years later, Jonah has rebuilt his life as a successful artist and moves in the fashionable circles of 90s London. Sally is all but a distant memory that he has tried to bury for good. Sally too has moved on, but when suddenly Jonah returns to Cornwall and reappears in her life, she finds herself torn between him and Ewan, the Cornish farmer she has married, divided between loyalty and passion, duty and love. Over the course of nearly two decades, through meetings and partings, secrets and revelations, and two momentous summers, Jonah will have to confront his past and heal old wounds, while Sally will face the consequences of her choices – whether to follow her conscience or her heart.
