Finding Time for your Scholarly Writing addresses the problem of juggling writing alongside your other responsibilities. I identify three kinds of time: full days, longish sessions, and short snatches. In this Short Guide, I explain what kinds of writing you can do in each, and suggest ways of combining the three to ensure that you make the best use of the time available at different points in the academic year. Volume 2 of the Short Guides Series.

See Volume 1, The Scholarly Writing Process for further details of the different kinds of writing tasks you might do in each kind of writing time. Approx length: 13 700 words including notes & references
