Lily: Nothing is worth this pain. Nothing. And certainly no outlaw biker Prez...or whatever he is. My animal's rising close to the surface. Howling and thrashing.

Demanding to be freed. A part of me wants to unchain her. Free her. Let her roam. But she'll murder everyone I care about, then turn on me. There's one person who can help. The dirtbag biker. The man who marked me. My bloodmate. But I'd rather die than ask. Aaron: My crew was right.

The cop girl and me have no future. Only thing to do is put her out of my mind and move on. An alpha predator acts. Makes a decision and sees it through. No matter how lousy it feels. Only humans waste their lives fretting and worrying about what can't be changed. I acted. Now it's time to see it through. Besides, I got other things to worry about. Like my MC. My pack. The world's changing. The Blood Moon rises. Species survive or die off. It's natural law. And I tell you this: I'm no one's prey. But my wolf? He's still roaming, nose bent low to the ground, scenting for his bloodmate...
