Sparks fly between a sexy stranger and a small-town waitress in this steamy new contemporary romance... When new teen TV series 'Bittersweet' begins shooting in Dogwood, Virginia, the small town is abuzz with excitement. But local waitress Cathy Johnson has too much on her plate to waste time being star-struck. To Cathy, "bittersweet" is just the word that sums up her love-life after her high school romance ended in disaster. Since then she's hardly had time to brush her hair, let alone think about relationships. Certainly not the kind being played out in front of the cameras by impossibly beautiful actors posing as teenagers... But all that changes when tall, dark, blue-eyed stranger Greg Moran arrives in Dogwood along with the 'Bittersweet' cast and crew. Cathy and the devastatingly sexy New Yorker have instant chemistry. But Greg blows hot (STEAMING hot) and cold with her romantically, leaving Cathy's head in a spin. She has a feeling he's keeping something from her... If Cathy is willing to drop her emotional walls, why is Greg still so intense and mysterious? What is it in his past – or present – that means he's keeping Cathy at arm's length? How badly has his heart really been broken before? Cathy and Greg are magnetically drawn to one another, but they'll have to fight to keep their relationship from turning sour. Will they make it? If it's hard to let go of the past, falling in love can be BITTERSWEET...
